"What type of anesthesia do you use for a facelift or rhinoplasty?"

By: Anurag Agarwal, M.D., F.A.C.S.

One fear that many patients have about undergoing facial plastic surgery is anesthesia. At the Aesthetic Surgery Center, Dr. Agarwal uses a deep intravenous (IV) anesthetic for all facial procedures (including endoscopic facelifts, rhinoplasty, most eyelid surgeries and the Uplift™ procedure). What this means is that you will not feel anything, you will not remember anything, and you will not wake up during the procedure. At the same time, you are breathing on your own and we do not intubate you or administer any anesthetic gases. The primary agent is Propofol, which is commonly used during colonoscopy procedures. The beauty of this drug, which is administered in a monitored environment in our AAAASF certified operating facility, is that it works quickly and wears off quickly. Being able to perform these procedures without anesthetic gases or paralytic drugs and without a breathing tube means less side effects for you and a more pleasant recovery. It is a safe technique, requires a skilled anesthetist (our anesthetist, Sherry Kutz, has 18 years experience with this technique), and is the type of anesthesia I have used for all of my procedures for the last 12 years. Please click on the link below to watch an example of IV sedation being administered to one of my patients:

Skin Spa combination treatments for synergistic results...ThermiSmooth™ and Micro-needling skin tightening. This special package price ends December 31, 2017!

You work hard to make sure you look as young as you feel so why not give your skin a boost this holiday season! ThermiSmooth™ and Micro-needling are designed to encourage the body's collagen production. Both therapies use drastically different techniques to achieve the same result, therefore these two therapies can be used in conjunction with each other for optimal results.

ThermiSmooth™ tightens fine lines and wrinkles around the eyes and mouth by heating the deeper layers of the skin using radiofrequency energy. This dermal heating triggers collagen remodeling and tightening from the undersurface. On the other hand, Micro-needling targets the skin from the outside, creating micro-punctures in the skin to create a controlled skin injury. Each puncture creates a channel that triggers the body to fill these microscopic wounds by producing new collagen and elastin. This helps with superficial scars and reducing pore size.

Patients who use ThermiSmooth with Micro-needling have visibly more pronounced and longer lasting results when these two procedures are combined. Between November 1, 2017 and December 31, 2017, we invite our patients to take advantage of a series of ThermiSmooth™ and Micro-needling treatments for a total of $1,700 (normally valued at $2000).

Please call 239-594-9100 to schedule your ThermiSmooth™/Micro-needling series with one of our licensed aestheticians.
