Loss of areola due to breast cancer can be devastating to one's self esteem. 3D Areola Micropigmentation is a complex medical tattooing procedure, which can be a great option for clients who would like to start over after mastectomy or reconstruction due to breast cancer, a medical condition, or to hide areola scarring.

After breast reconstruction is completed, the tattooing process may begin 12 weeks post-surgery.

Unlike other medical tattoos, areola tattoos tend to be very unique. The procedure or the number of sessions may differ depending on the scarring around the area and the condition of the skin.

Areola Restorative Tattoo is not just for women who have had surgery. This procedure is also known to help people with loss of areola color or who have small uneven areola. It is an effective semi-permanent procedure that allows clients to feel more confident about their bodies.

This procedure requires a skilled and experienced permanent makeup artist, such as Ilaria at the Aesthetic Surgery Center. On the day of the procedure, Ilaria will measure and draw the shape, and color-match before starting. The color will look bright for five days. Afterwards, the color will settle by 40%. You will go home with aftercare instructions.

If you have any questions about 3D Areola Restorative Tattoo or any of our Medical Tattooing procedures, please call 239-594-9100 to schedule a consultation with Ilaria.
